

András Jenei

Advisor/Ministry of National Development, Hungary

András Jenei is currently Advisor to the Ministry of National Development, State Secretary for Energy Affairs, Hungary and Head of Energy Institute at Centre for Fair Political Analysis, a think-tank based in Budapest. He studied engineering management at Technical University of Budapest (BME) and holds a Bsc from Political Sciences at King Sigismund College. His research fields are energy policy, unconventional gas exploration and energy security focusing on natural gas in Eastern Europe, the former Soviet Union and the Caspian region. At unconventional gas in the past five years his main focus was on tight and shale gas upstream in the CEE region with a focus on regulatory framework and environmental issues.